

Unveiling the Future of Healthcare Education

Hello again INHWE Members! You may remember that last year we mentioned our partnership with the Evidence-Based Nursing blog to run a series of articles with our members from across the globe. Well, I am delighted to say another of these blogs, 'Unveiling the Future of Healthcare Education: The Power of Interprofessional Collaboration', produced by Selena Gilles, Natalya Pasklinsky and Beth Latimer (all of New York University, Rory Meyers College of Nursing, USA), is now live!

In a world where healthcare complexities abound, the need for effective collaboration has never been more pronounced. Interprofessional collaboration, which brings together diverse healthcare disciplines, offers a holistic approach to patient care that transcends traditional boundaries. As the national dialogue on the cost of education for students gains momentum, the NYU Rory Meyers College of Nursing Interprofessional Education (IPE) Scholarship Program emerges as a beacon of innovation, tackling the pressing issue of supporting the next generation of nursing leaders.
