IPE & INHWE

Hello again INHWE members! As you probably know, we are committed to advancing interprofessional education as a core strategy for equipping the global health workforce to work collaboratively, innovate and respond to complex health needs. This year we will continue to work with colleagues within our free, inclusive membership network to enhance interdisciplinary dialogue and knowledge sharing . The 4th International Online Conference of Health Workforce Education saw over 350 international delegates involved in interprofessional learning and collaboration while the upcoming 6th International Congress of Health Workforce Education and Research will be on the theme of “Innovating Together – the Future of IPE”. We also help drive region-specific collaboration through initiatives like the Southern Europe Interprofessional Education Network \(SE-IPEN\), which builds culturally relevant partnerships in IPE across Southern Europe. Our active participation and leadership in projects such as the ECHOES digital platform for exchanging expertise and the VIPE Academy – both designed to enhance virtual and interprofessional collaboration further reflect our strategic commitment to developing educators’ capacity to facilitate high-quality IPE. Collectively, these activities demonstrate our ongoing dedication to embedding IPE into health workforce education. This commitment already extends well into 2027 with the hosting of the All Together Better Health Conference in Cyprus and we continue to look for opportunities to support IPE beyond this. If you have any ideas or suggestions, you can reach out to us at any time.
