WELCOME

It is my great pleasure to welcome you to the 4th International Online Conference of Health Workforce Education. We are absolutely delighted to welcome everyone online for the next 3 days. One of the things that makes today especially meaningful is that this event is free to attend. By removing financial barriers, we are opening the door to shared learning, collaboration, and innovation for everyone regardless of location, role, or resources. That commitment to accessibility is at the very heart of INHWE's aim.

The response to this event has been truly inspiring. Over 370 delegates from 61 different countries registered, representing a remarkable diversity of cultures, perspectives, and experiences. This global reach reminds us that while our healthcare and educational systems may differ, our challenges, values, and ambitions are shared. This is reflected in the broad programme, featuring presenters from over 35 countries and across a wide range of healthcare professions. This diversity is intentional and representative of our Network. By bringing together such a diverse group, our Online Conference creates global dialogue and knowledge sharing between health workforce educators, researchers and policy makers that is truly unprecedented.

We encourage you to take full advantage of the sessions, engage with speakers and fellow delegates, and embrace the opportunity to learn from one another. This is more than a conference, it is a global community coming together with a shared purpose. Thank you for being part of this event, for contributing your time and expertise, and for helping us break down barriers to learning and collaboration.
