

Leadership: Is a new approach needed when it comes to Digital?

Jess Radcliffe
Improvement & Programme Manager,
NIHR Clinical Research Network

Who are the NIHR?

#WeAreNihR

Context

Shifting balance

HIERARCHICAL ORGANIZATIONS

© Jacob Morgan (thefutureorganization.com)

Pace of responsiveness

What do we expect of Digital Leaders?

- Create space for operational staff to flourish and thrive in the context of digital; work in new ways, trial ideas
- Manage up as innovative ideas come through the system
- Represent and champion change; celebrate success, promote learning
- Open up the system to operational staff, connect them and enable them to connect
- Support the operational staff to navigate appropriate management and governance channels and processes
- Help people articulate their ideas; translate up and down the organisation

A horizontal bar composed of several colored segments: green, dark green, orange, red, purple, and blue.

Is a new approach to Leadership needed when it comes to Digital?

most effective leaders

National Institute for
Health Research

Democratising digital

Digital Festival

Leadership at every level

Community

Integration into all learning programmes

Thank you

National Institute for
Health Research

Hamer, S – Director of Nursing, Learning
& Organisational Development (CRN)

Mould, A – Health of AHP/Pharmacy &
Continuous Improvement (CRN)

@DigitalCRN | #DigitalCRN | @JessCRN_AD